Score Breakdown

Component	Points
CRAWLABILITY	20
ON PAGE	15
STRUCTURED DATA	10
MOBILE SPEED	15
HYGIENE	5

• Core site architecture exists and can support better commercial performance once optimized

Issues Found

• Finding: Mobile performance is under target at 61/100 with LCP around 8669 ms. Why it matters: Slow mobile rendering reduces first impressions, hurts Core Web Vitals, and suppresses both paid and organic conversion efficiency. Business impact: Higher bounce rate and lower session depth reduce the chance that anonymous visitors ever reach service or proof pages. Recommended action: Prioritize image compression, script deferral, caching, and template cleanup on the homepage and highest-traffic service pages. Expected outcome: Improved execution against: Prioritize image compression, script deferral, caching, and template cleanup on the homepage and highest-traffic service pages. Evidence: Desktop performance: 75/100

• Finding: Heading hierarchy appears incomplete or inconsistent. Why it matters: Search engines and buyers both rely on clear page structure to understand topic focus and scanning flow. Business impact: Weak heading structure reduces topical relevance and makes service pages feel less authoritative. Recommended action: Add a single commercial H1 per key page and align supporting H2 sections to buyer intent, deliverables, proof, and FAQs. Expected outcome: Improved execution against: Add a single commercial H1 per key page and align supporting H2 sections to buyer intent, deliverables, proof, and FAQs

• Finding: This area needs a clearer commercial interpretation to support decision-making. Why it matters: A premium report should translate raw evidence into business action rather than leaving the implication implicit. Business impact: If the implication stays vague, the report loses operational usefulness. Recommended action: Add one benchmark-based insight tied to revenue, trust, visibility, or conversion performance. Expected outcome: The section becomes concrete enough to guide action

2.2. Content Quality Assessment

Content Quality Score: 44/100

• Existing off-site trust can support stronger owned-media proof once integrated

Gaps

• Finding: Case-study discovery is weak. Why it matters: B2B buyers need evidence of execution quality, especially when evaluating an offshore or white-label delivery partner. Business impact: Without visible proof, more pipeline depends on low-trust discovery calls and price comparison instead of value-based buying. Recommended action: Publish at least three proof-led case studies by service line and industry, each with baseline, intervention, and measurable result. Expected outcome: Improved execution against: Publish at least three proof-led case studies by service line and industry, each with baseline, intervention, and measurable result

• Finding: Content architecture is too shallow for a strong non-brand acquisition program. Why it matters: Search-led growth for agencies comes from a network of service, niche, comparison, and proof pages rather than a single brand page. Business impact: A shallow content footprint caps traffic growth and makes lead generation overly dependent on direct outreach or referrals. Recommended action: Build a content cluster around white-label SEO, PPC, design, development, fulfillment process, and agency partnership models. Expected outcome: Improved execution against: Build a content cluster around white-label SEO, PPC, design, development, fulfillment process, and agency partnership models

• Finding: This area needs a clearer commercial interpretation to support decision-making. Why it matters: A premium report should translate raw evidence into business action rather than leaving the implication implicit. Business impact: If the implication stays vague, the report loses operational usefulness. Recommended action: Add one benchmark-based insight tied to revenue, trust, visibility, or conversion performance. Expected outcome: The section becomes concrete enough to guide action

Recommendations

• Publish at least three proof-led case studies by service line and industry, each with baseline, intervention, and measurable result

• Build a content cluster around white-label SEO, PPC, design, development, fulfillment process, and agency partnership models

• Add one benchmark-based insight tied to revenue, trust, visibility, or conversion performance

2.3. UX & Conversion Optimization

UX/Conversion Score: 74/100

• Clear CTA detected on homepage

Issues Holding Back Conversions

• Finding: Conversion flow needs clearer buyer progression from interest to inquiry. Why it matters: Agency buyers want an efficient path from positioning to proof to action without hunting across the site. Business impact: Friction in that journey reduces demo rates and weakens close-rate quality because prospects arrive under-qualified or unconvinced. Recommended action: Sequence each page with a clear narrative: problem, offer, process, proof, FAQs, and one dominant CTA. Expected outcome: More visitors progress from evaluation into a qualified inquiry instead of bouncing or postponing contact

• Finding: Sitewide conversion paths exist but are not tightly orchestrated. Why it matters: The presence of contact or booking pages alone does not guarantee efficient lead capture if the user journey is fragmented. Business impact: Traffic can leak between pages without reaching the highest-value conversion path. Recommended action: Map each CTA to a specific conversion intent: discovery call, scoped proposal, or audit request, and make that taxonomy consistent sitewide. Expected outcome: The funnel becomes easier to navigate, measure, and optimize across both homepage and service-page traffic

• Finding: This area needs a clearer commercial interpretation to support decision-making. Why it matters: A premium report should translate raw evidence into business action rather than leaving the implication implicit. Business impact: If the implication stays vague, the report loses operational usefulness. Recommended action: Add one benchmark-based insight tied to revenue, trust, visibility, or conversion performance. Expected outcome: The section becomes concrete enough to guide action

- Follow up with unhappy clients and ask them to update reviews once resolved
- Implement a review-request workflow after delivery (email/WhatsApp), targeting 2-4 new reviews per month
- Even with strong sentiment, reply to reviews and keep collecting them to maintain momentum
- Double down on what people praise: Atlantic Foundation, Insurance Company. Put this into your marketing messaging
